Independent of German Potash

Close upon the heels of the particulars concerning the achievements of American chemists in putting our own national dyes "over the top," comes frequent official assurances that "the United States does not need German potash." Secretary of the Interior, Franklin K. Lane, says that when the war started, this country having had nearly a quarter of a million tons of potash from Germany each year, found herself suddenly cut off from this important fertilizer material. American scientists got busy and it was not long before potash was being obtained from the brine lakes of California, Nebraska and other States; from kelp, and from the seaweed of the Pacific Coast, and from various minerals. The scarcity of potash has boosted the price; and this new industry has been profitable.

Strangely enough, in the very hour when so much is being looked for from the Government, and at the very moment when so many nimble-minded political gentlemen are forecasting the Utopia that is to come with a socialistic form of government, we find that the two great needs of American industry, namely dyes and potash, have recorded their industrial achievement by the route of private initiative. Just as the great transcontinental railroads were built by American capitalists, to meet the needs of a rapidly expanding population, and just as electric power and waterways, and ten thousand first-class miracles in industry and business were brought about by the initiative of human beings seeking fame and fortune, so has the great problem with reference to potash been solved by American genius and enterprise.

A Blind Man Could Tell!

We wonder how many of our readers have noticed the difference between the man who has been married but a short time and one who has been married several years. You can always tell a young husband from an old one. When a man has been married a few months, you will generally see him working in the garden or fixing up about the house and while he works he whistles, or sings, or occasionally looks up toward the window to see if anyone is watching him. A year later he is still working in the garden, but the smile has been exchanged for a frown and he occasionally looks up toward the house wondering why in thunder breakfast is not ready. Another year rolls by and his looks would sour milk, but he is still at work, stopping occasionally to kick the dog or throw a brick at the cat. The next year we find him sitting on the porch smoking a pipe while his wife does the digging in the garden. Now just watch our young men, as one by one they are caught in Cupid's net and see if this rule does not work out the problem correctly.

Blighty—which means home to British Tommies, comes from Belaiti—a Hindoo word meaning the seat of government.

RELIGIOUS.

—Mr. Rupert Blue, Surgeon General of the Public Health Service, has asked the clergymen of the country to set aside February 9 as Health Sunday to preach sermons emphasizing the responsibility of the nation to protect returning soldiers and sailors and help combat social diseases.

—At the instance of the Commission of the Protestant Episcopal Church on the World Conference on Faith and Order, the protestant churches of the world are asked to observe the week beginning Sunday, January 19, as a world-wide week of prayer. The object of this special week of prayer is to secure the prayers, both public and private, of Christians of all denominations.

—Every Methodist pastor, and the "live wire" key man of each church within Ohio, Southern Indiana and Kentucky, are expected to attend the Centenary Convention of the Cincinnati area, at Memorial Hall, Columbus, O., January 22, 23 and 24. The gathering will be one of the greatest, if not the greatest, meeting of Methodists ever held within this area.

The church has set out to secure pledges of $80,000,000 to be paid within the next five years, to carry on extensive work at home and abroad. Conditions created by the world war have been taken into careful account in the program. "But the deepest significance of the Centenary goes far beyond the raising of a great sum of money," say its leaders.

CONSTIPATION AND INDIGESTION

"I have used Chamberlain's Tablets and must say they are the best I have ever used for constipation and indigestion. My wife also used them for indigestion and they did her good," writes Eugene S. Knight, Wilmington, N. C. Obtainable everywhere. (Jan-adv)

I can remember when people did not think of advancing any other excuse for going down town New Year's Eve except a desire to listen to the chimes of Old Trinity.

WOMEN OF SEDENTARY HABITS

Women who get little exercise are likely to be troubled with constipation and indigestion and will find Chamberlain's Tablets highly beneficial. Not so good as a three or four mile walk every day, but very much better than to allow the bowels to remain in a constipated condition. They are easy and pleasant to take and most agreeable in effect. Obtainable everywhere. (Jan-adv)
